200 REFRIGERATED CONTAINERS

(1) Consignments will be carried under the normal Owner's Risk Conditions of Carriage as laid down in section 12 of the Tariff Book. In addition to the normal limitations, the Railway will accept no liability for loss or deterioration of the contents of the container through failure to recharge en route. Recooling en route will only be undertaken where this facility is available at the request in writing of the consignor specifying the points at which recooling is required, provided that should the consignment be unexpectedly delayed in transit, the Railway may, where practicable and if in their opinion it is required in order to maintain the good condition of the contents of the container, recharge the container at any convenient point. This recharging will be at the expense of the senders, notwithstanding the fact that no request has been made to recharge

Charges for recooling the container en route will be Sh 15 for each recharge. In the event of the initial cooling being undertaken by the Railway the charge for this service will be Sh 30, but this will only be undertaken in special circumstances and by prior arrangement

(2) The following free periods will be allowed for loading and off-loading —

Loading — 24 consecutive hours if the container is handed over to the consignee at its predetermined operating temperature

Off-loading — Seven working hours

During the period of off-loading the consignee will undertake to charge the container so as to maintain as far as is practicable, its operating temperature. A demurrage charge of Sh 5 per working hour will be raised if the free period is exceeded

(3) Consignors and consignees will reimburse the Railway for any repairs required through damage done to the bodies, whether internal or external, the electrical machinery, the eutectic plates, or any other part of the containers while they are in the possession of the consignor or consignee, or while they are being transferred by persons other than the Railway
