1 The Kenya Union of Commercial Food and Allied Workers shall hereinafter be referred to as the Claimants and Freight Forwarders Kenya Ltd shall hereinafter be referred to as the Respondents

2 The parties were heard in Nairobi on 30th March and 18th and 19th April, 1978, and in addition to relying on their written and verbal submissions called the following witnesses to give evidence on oath —

Claimants — Hashamali Mohamedali

Respondents — Amirali K Somji

AWARD

3 The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 7th October, 1977, duly signed by the parties was received by the Court on 6th February, 1978, along with the statutory certificates signed by the Minister for Labour and the Labour Commissioner

Hashamali is a retired employee of the Mombasa Municipal Council where he had worked in the revenue section as the officer-in-charge He is getting a pension of Sh 500 p m and at the date of his retirement on 28th February, 1974, was 56 years old

He told the Court that since then he had been a freelance accountant and from the various assignments he got he earned every month between Sh 1,000 to Sh 1,500

He started working for the Respondents on 22nd September, 1975. He claims that in the first place he was interviewed by the manager of Diamond Trust, Mombasa, who had told him that the Respondents wanted a fully experienced man on permanent basis and they wanted a person who would not leave the country. As he is a Kenya citizen he was found to be acceptable and although he had asked for a monthly salary of Sh 3,000 he started working for Sh 2,750 on permanent basis. He was asked to work, according to him, under the chief accountant.

The Respondents, however, maintain that he was introduced to them by S K Anjarwalla, a Mombasa advocate. The Respondents produced an affidavit dated 17th April, 1978, sworn by Anjarwalla stating that Hashamali was well known to him and at his request he had found him a job with the Respondent which, however, was a temporary job to last six to seven months. Further that Hashamali had accepted the offer of this job.

The Respondents' managing director, Somji, while giving evidence stated that both the manager of the Diamond Trust and Anjarwalla had recommended Hashamali to him for a job.

On 30th July, 1976, as Hashamali wanted to go to U.K. to attend his son's wedding he applied for leave. He received a letter from the personnel manager stating that his 21 days' leave had been approved with effect from 9th August, 1976 to 1st September, 1976, and that he should report back for duty on 2nd September, 1976. This letter is dated 30th July, 1976.

On 31st July, 1976, he was served with a letter of termination which read:

"Further to our conversation on 30th July, 1976, this is to confirm that your services are terminated from 1st September, 1976, and that you will be paid a month's salary in lieu of this notice.

You may proceed on 21 days leave from 9th August, 1976.

We thank you for your services and wish you the very best in the future."

Surprisingly on 5th August, 1976, the Respondents' personnel manager wrote to Hashamali stating that he was not an employee of the Respondents since the personnel manager did not have any records and he was therefore unable to grant him any leave since he is not an employee of the Respondents.

The dispute regarding Hashamali's termination without just and reasonable cause was investigated by the Ministry of Labour and the Chief Industrial Relations Officer suggested to the parties that he should be paid one month's salary in compensation for the loss of his job in addition to any other terminal benefits to which he may be entitled.

The Claimants have submitted that Hashamali was a permanent employee of the Respondents and was not offered a temporary job for performing specific duties. They alleged that he had been victimized because he had decided to join them whereas all other Asian employees of the Respondents had been intimidated by the Respondents with the result that although they had all first wanted to join the Claimants later on they decided against it with the exception of Hashamali.

The Claimants felt that since their member had been wrongfully dismissed as there was no reason for the Respondents to terminate his services he should get full compensation as laid down under the Trade Disputes Act.

The Respondents on the other hand maintained that Hashamali was offered a temporary job lasting between 6 to 8 months during which he was required to carry out special duties which were the reconciliation of disbursements of the Respondents, Reynolds & Co, Kenya General Agencies and Wafco Ltd as all these firms had merged together to form the Respondents' company. Hashamali was required to sort out the mess in the reconciliation of accounts of all these companies.

The Respondents stated that when Hashamali had applied for leave they had decided that as he had nearly finished the work for which he was engaged on temporary basis there was no need for him to continue in employment and they had decided to terminate his services. The managing director while giving evidence stated that he had decided to give Hashamali four weeks' notice of termination plus three weeks' leave so that in these seven weeks he could find alternative employment.

The Court must say that it finds the Respondents' behaviour in this dispute, to say the least, most odd. To begin with during the Ministry of Labour's investigations they had maintained that Hashamali had never been their employee but was a personal employee of the managing director, Somji and that he had been given a specific job in connection with Somji's old and now dissolved company, Kenya General Agencies. The Respondents therefore did not have any responsibility for him. Then when Hashamali applied for leave the Respondents' personnel manager approved his leave and the next day on 31st July, 1976, the managing director of the Respondents had proceeded to terminate his service with the Respondents. To make matters worse for them on 5th August, 1976, the personnel manager informed Hashamali that as he was not an employee of the Respondents he could not be granted any leave.

All these contradictions certainly do not help the Respondents in this dispute and it appears that either they are completely confused over this matter or they are deliberately trying to get out of their responsibilities and obligations towards Hashamali.

The Court is satisfied that whatever the reason that prompted the Respondents to employ Hashamali, the fact remains that they employed him on a monthly basis at a salary of Sh 2,750 p.m. and that he was not a personal employee of the Respondents' managing director, Somji.

The Court has further come to the conclusion that had Hashamali not applied for leave his services probably would not have been terminated so soon.

Having made these findings the Court notes that Hashamali had not been issued with a letter of appointment although he was promised that he would get one in due course and S K Anjarwalla's affidavit stating that Somji had told him that Hashamali could be employed on a temporary job to last six to seven months.

The Court, however, is of the view that even if Hashamali was taken on temporarily he was subsequently treated to all intents and purposes as a regular employee and his duties as allocated by the financial controller were as follows —

- (a) Reconciling the freight and miscellaneous disbursement accounts
- (b) Any special duty
- (c) Standby for any other duty as directed by the accountant."

After careful consideration of all the submissions the Court finds that Hashamali has indeed suffered a wrongful dismissal but as the Claimants have dropped their demand for his reinstatement the Court has to decide what compensation, if any, to award Hashamali. The Claimants are demanding a sum of Sh 33,000 being Hashamali's 12 months salary. Keeping all the circumstances of this dispute in mind the Court awards that Hashamali should be paid a sum of Sh 5,500 being two months' salary by way of compensation for the wrongful dismissal that he has suffered in addition to the month's notice and three weeks' leave which was offered to him by the Respondents.
