THE Kenya Union of Employees of Voluntary Associations, Trade Unions and Allied Organizations shall hereinafter be referred to as the appellant.

2. The Honourable Minister for Labour shall hereinafter be referred to as the minister.

3. The Kudheisha Workers shall hereinafter be referred to as the interested party.

The parties made very strong arguments in their submissions during the hearing of this application for leave to appeal on 9th July, 1991, which the court considered in depth.

The appellant submitted that on 20th September, 1990, they wrote to the Ministry of Education demanding the revocation of the recognition agreement between the various boards of governors in the country and the interested party. Their demand was turned down by the Ministry of Education. Consequently, on 11th January, 1990, they reported a trade dispute to the Minister for Labour. The issues in dispute were:

(i) Recognition agreement for boards of governors.

(ii) Legality and validity of the ministry's recognition of the interested party.

The appellant stressed that the report of the dispute was rejected by the minister apparently on the strength that, the Ministry of Education had valid recognition and collective agreements with the interested party. They contended that the minister did not exercise his powers fairly by invoking section 5 (1) (a) and (c) of the Trade Disputes Act which enabled him to reject the dispute. The appellant asserted that the minister should have allowed the laid down machinery to be exhausted so that all the affected parties could be heard. Subsequently, all matters pertaining to the dispute could have been argued by the parties and a fair decision reached. They insisted that the parties were not heard and the rejection of the dispute was contrary to the intentions of section 5 (1) (a) and (c) of the Trade Disputes Act.

The appellant further stressed that, under the Education Act they are the proper trade union for the boards of governors of the various schools. They also referred the court to Legal No. 34/77 paragraphs 2 and 3 (3) and claimed that the notice treats boards of governors as voluntary associations.

The appellants went on to state that the interested party are not competent to represent the interests of employees in the educational institutions. They explained that the interested party have not recruited more than 10 per cent of the employees under the Ministry of Education and wondered whose interests the interested party were representing.

They pleaded with the court to allow their application for leave to appeal and further order the minister to accept the report of their trade dispute with the Ministry of Education.

The minister received a report on the existence of a trade dispute from the appellant on 11th January, 1991. The dispute was between the appellant and the Ministry of Education and the issues in dispute were namely:

- (i) Recognition agreement for boards of governors.
- (ii) Legality and validity of the ministry's recognition of the Kudheha Workers—the interested party.

The dispute was thereafter placed before the Tripartite Committee for consideration in accordance with the provisions of the Trade Disputes Act. This committee on 22nd February, 1991, rejected the dispute citing the existence of a valid recognition and collective agreements between the Ministry of Education and the interested party since 1964.

The minister acting on the advice of the Tripartite Committee considered it prudent to reject the report of the dispute under section 5 (1) (a) and (c) of Trade Disputes Act. The substance of the two issues named in dispute by the appellant were, therefore, considered and found to have no basis because the interested party and Ministry of Education are quite happy with their agreements.

The minister further submitted that the industrial demarcation between the appellant and the interested party in relation to the Ministry of Education and the Boards of Governors is quite clear and it would be improper to encourage the appellant to represent industrial interests of employees under the boards. He stressed that there is nothing voluntary about the educational institutions under boards of governors and the appellants' main aim is to interfere and bring chaos in other trade unions' areas of representations. He explained that the appellant's registered constitution, rule 3 does not include education institutions and boards of governors of schools under the Ministry of Education. The minister advanced the point that the appellant if they wished to enrol members in new spheres of influence then they should first amend their registered constitution through the proper channels. The appellants were accused of trying to bend the Trade Disputes Act and misusing the court's time hoping they would achieve their futile ambitions.

The minister concluded his submissions by saying that the refusal of the dispute was legally made under section 5 (1) (a) and (c) of the Trade Disputes Act. The same provisions do inhibit the court from hearing any appeal arising from the said section.

The interested party submitted that their relationship with the Ministry of Education dates back to 1964. The interested party claimed that they have valid recognition agreement with the Ministry of Education with whom they have entered into and concluded several collective agreements covering terms and conditions of service of their employees. The minister confirms this.

The interested party stressed that the Ministry of Education is neither a voluntary association nor a trade union or a political party which are the areas of representation of the appellant. Consequently they averred that the appellant had erred in reporting a trade dispute. They further referred the court to the appellant's constitution which they claimed is explicit on membership recruitment and pointed out that the Ministry of Education is not within the scope of the appellant's constitution. The interested party affirmed that their constitution fully covers the areas being contested by the appellant.

The interested party emphasized that the appellant had no constitutional mandate to approach the Ministry of Education for recognition, let alone reporting a trade dispute against it. They felt that the appellant have no legal basis upon which they could appeal against the minister's decision and in so doing they were trying to force their way to the court. The interested party summed up their submissions by stating that the appellant in lodging the appeal were indirectly trying to legalize the dispute placed before the minister. They urged the court to sustain the minister's decision and reject the application for appeal as it has no legal basis with costs.

The court notes that the minister on the advice of the Tripartite Committee rejected the report of a trade dispute made to him by the appellant on the following two issues:

- (i) Recognition agreement for boards of governors.
- (ii) Legality and validity of the ministry's recognition of Kudheha Workers—the interested party.

The minister's rejection of the report of the said trade dispute was made under section 5 (1) (a) and (c) of the Trade Disputes Act because the employer has valid recognition and collective agreements respectively with the interested party which represents the employees of the schools being run by the boards of governors.

The court has carefully gone through the whole of section 5 of the Trade Disputes Act and finds that there is no right of appeal accorded to any party when the minister acts under section 5 (1) (a) and (c).

The parties can appeal against the minister's order if it is made in connection with and under section 5 (2) but this is not the case in the present application for leave to appeal.

It is obvious to the court that the appellant has not studied the relevant provisions of the Trade Disputes Act properly otherwise they would not have made this application for leave to appeal which is totally misconceived as they have no right of appeal where the minister rejects the report of a trade dispute under section 5 (1) (a) and (c).

In view of this there is no point in going over the respective constitutions of the appellant and the interested party or to consider any other points raised by the parties during the hearing of this application.

The court rejects this application for leave to appeal against the minister's order and upholds the minister's order.

The court would like to draw the attention of the appellant that under section 32 (1) of the Trade Disputes Act, the court has power to give such directions as to the costs of the appeal as the court thinks proper.

In this instance the court will not make any order as to costs but in future the court will seriously think in this direction so that the parties do not waste the court's and the minister's valuable time in making applications for leave to appeal where no such right exists.

GAZETTE NOTICE No. 4103

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

APPEAL No. 2 OF 1991

Parties:

Kenya Union of Employees of Voluntary Associations, Trade Unions and Allied Organizations (Appellants)

versus

The Minister of Labour (Respondent)

Kenya Union of Domestic, Hotels, Educational Institutions, Hospitals and Allied Workers (Interested Party)

Ruling:

The applicants have lodged this application for leave to appeal under section 32 of the Trade Disputes Act (Cap. 234), (hereinafter referred to as "the Act"), challenging the validity of the refusal by the Minister for Labour dated 26th March, 1991, to invoke the provisions of section 8 of the Act concerning the termination of Mr. Samuel Masila Mwaniki by the interested party. The contents of the impugned refusal run as follows:

"Please be informed that the minister only invokes section 8 of the Trade Disputes Act when one party refuses to go to the Industrial Court voluntarily."

Section 8 of the Act states as under:

"Where a trade dispute has not been settled under sections 5, 6 and 7 the minister may, in a case where an appeal to the the Industrial Court does not already lie, on the representation of any trade union, employer or group of employers, refer the dispute to the Industrial Court and the provisions of Part IV shall apply to such reference."

It is not necessary to refer to all the facts as mentioned in the pleadings in this case. The position leading to this appeal is that the dispute between the appellants and the interested party was first reported to the respondent on 8th October, 1985. He rejected the dispute under section 5 (i) (c) of the Act, and appellants appealed against his order, which appeal was registered as Appeal No. 2 of 1985. However, by consent of the parties (appellants and the interested party) the appeal was withdrawn on the understanding that the appellants would report a fresh dispute to the respondent. The parties failed to submit their memoranda to enable the respondent investigate the matter further or refer it to the Industrial Court; and, in the circumstances, the respondent could neither investigate the matter further nor refer it to this court under section 8 of the Act as demanded by the appellants.

The appellants reargued the matter on 22nd April, 1990, and the respondent rejected it as stated at the commencement of this appeal. In their submission they accused the respondent of misinterpreting section 8 of the Act, which empowers him to refer to this court any dispute which the parties have been unable to settle. The appellants contended that the grievant has been denied justice because of the delay since 1985. Accordingly, they urged the court to find that the respondent improperly exercised his powers under the aforementioned section of the Act and order him to refer the dispute to this court for determination and final disposal.

On the other hand, the respondent submitted that although he was empowered thereunder to refer a dispute to the court irrespective of the parties' submissions, he could not do so because the file on the matter was misplaced and it was also necessary for him to receive before hand a report of the investigation on the matter. He accused the appellants of not using the laid down machinery in presenting their case. The respondent, however, conceded some laxity on the part of the investigator over the matter, but undertook to have it processed as usual; and, if necessary, forward the findings and recommendation to the court for consideration and final disposal.

The interested party submitted that they did not recognize the appellants as none of their more than 100 employees was a member of the latter's union. The appellants had, therefore, no right to report the dispute. In any case, there were no meetings or minutes between the parties of a deadlock on this matter; and, in the circumstances, a dispute could not, therefore, be reported on the basis of correspondence. Accordingly they prayed the court to uphold the respondent's order and reject the appeal.

This court, on careful consideration of the submissions made by the parties in this appeal, has not been able to appreciate the arguments advanced by the appellants. It is not for this court in this appeal to consider and make a finding regarding the validity or otherwise of the appellants' representation of the interested party's employees. On the contrary, this court would, in connection with the order refusing reference to it, only proceed to decide whether or not the reasons given by the respondents for such refusal are germane or relevant to the question of reference and not extraneous or arbitrary reasons. The impugned order shows that the original appeal was withdrawn by the appellants, and this is borne out by the respondent's submission which was never challenged by either the appellants or the interested party.

As there is nothing in this appeal to show that the reason given by the respondent in the impugned order is irrelevant and/or extraneous or arbitrary, the court is of the view that the respondent acted within the limits imposed upon him under section 8 of the Act. The appellants cannot, therefore, be allowed to reargue the matter; and, in the circumstances, the appeal must fail. The appeal is accordingly rejected as misconceived and baseless; and the matter will now be remanded back to the respondent for investigation in accordance with the laid down procedure under the Act.
