For the shareholders it shows:

- The limits of involvement
- The information to be submitted
- How to relate with and involve stakeholders
- How to monitor performance

For the directors of the entities who are not primed on what to expect it will guide them on:

1. What standards of boardroom behavior to adopt
2. Where to provide guidance
3. What to monitor
4. How to instill a culture of performance and appropriate reward
5. How to serve the public with water services
6. How to inform/involve stakeholders

For the staff:

1. It shows the limits of authority
2. The reporting lines
3. The genesis of performance oriented job contracts
4. Relationship between all the parties involved.

The content of this guideline will change as the water services sector continues to mature.

WASREB in approving the service provision agreements submitted will use the standards in this guideline to gauge the technical capacity of a WSP.

This guideline adheres to the standards set in the Companies Act Cap 486.

1. INTRODUCTION

1.1 The Water Policy No. 1 of 1999 discussed issues pertaining to:

1. Water Resources Management
2. Water and Sewerage Development
3. Institutional Frameworks
4. Financing the sector

1.2 This policy was supported by the Water Act 2002 which created several institutions to take charge of the provision of water services, the conservation of water catchments areas, the regulation of the water services sector and the resolution of disputes.

1.3 The water services sector has the following public institutions:

- a. The Water Services Regulatory Board
- b. The Water Service Boards which are:
 - i. Athi water Services Board
 - ii. Tana Water Services Board
 - iii. Northern Water Services Board
 - iv. Rift Valley Water Services Board
 - v. Coast Water Services Board
 - vi. Lake Victoria North Water Services Board
 - vii. Lake Victoria South Water Services Board
 - viii. Tanathi Water Services Board
- c. The Water Service Providers

Water Service Providers are appointed as agents of the water service boards and are supposed to operate in a manner that will maximize efficiency in the provision of water services and provide satisfaction and safety to all water service consumers, taking into account equity and sustainability. There is need therefore for a guideline that will govern the leadership and operation of all these entities, hence the need for the introduction of corporate governance into the sector.

This guideline is useful for all water service sector institutions with appropriate modification as the entity deems fit especially on the distinguishing features between the WSB and the WSP.

2. CORPORATE GOVERNANCE AND WASREB

2.1 Under section 47(h) of the Water Act 2002 WASREB is supposed to develop guidelines for and provide advice on the cost effective and efficient management and operation of water services.

2.2 Cost effective and efficient management and operation of water services can only be realized if the leadership in the water sector institutions is guided by the tenets of good governance. In the institutional set up, good governance is embedded in the tenets of corporate governance.

2.3 Corporate governance refers to the establishment of an appropriate legal, economic and institutional environment that allows companies to thrive as institutions for advancing long-term shareholder value and maximum human-centered development while remaining conscious of their other responsibilities to stakeholders, the environment and the society in general.

2.4 In the Water services sector good corporate governance requires that boards and senior management of the Services Boards and water service providers must govern their entities with integrity and enterprise in a manner which entrenches and enhances the objectives agreed under the license and the service provision agreement.

APPENDIX: FORMATS FOR SELF-EVALUATION OF THE WATER SERVICES BOARDS OF DIRECTORS

Introduction

Properly conducted, a Board self-evaluation can have a profound impact on a Board. If answers are given honestly, it can provide the impetus for a Board to resolve issues that have remained simmering unattended to and create synergy among the members.

Some of the reasons for conducting Board self-evaluation include:

- Giving individual members an opportunity to reflect on their individual and corporate responsibilities.
- Identifying different perceptions and opinions among Board Members.
- Pointing to issues that need Board attention.
- Serving as a springboard for Board improvements.
- Increasing the level of Board teamwork.
- Providing an opportunity for providing mutual Board and Staff expectations.
- Demonstrating to staff and other stakeholders that accountability is a serious organizational issue in the Board.
- Providing credibility with funders and other external persons/organizations.

Board members should see only the compiled results and not the responses of individual members in order to facilitate free and honest expressions in the responses. Responses which are not honest render the exercise useless and are of no benefit to the organization. Notes on the procedures for the evaluation have therefore been provided below the tables.

It is recommended that this evaluation be undertaken once a year.

The following Board Self-Evaluation is in three Sections:

Section A: Contains evaluation format of the Board by all members and is in three parts, i.e.

1. Board Responsibility
2. Board Operations
3. Board Effectiveness

Section B: Contains an evaluation format of the Chairperson by other members of the Board.

Section C: Contains an evaluation format of individual members of the Board by the Chairman.

It is recommended that for the Board starts initially with Section A and then move on later to Sections B and C when the members have become more familiar and comfortable with self-evaluations

Section A: Self-Evaluation of the Board by All Members of the Board

Notes on Section A:

- The evaluation process should be handled confidentially and the Directors should be assured of such confidentiality. In this regard, the intended evaluation and the format it will take should be discussed by the Board as an agenda item at one of the meetings. The forms can also be modified at that meeting as appropriate.
- Once the final formats are agreed on, the forms should be produced and given to the Directors with deadline for returning them completed to the person appointed to coordinate the exercise.
- A senior officer cleared to handle confidential materials should be appointed to coordinate the exercise including analysis and production of the report for discussion by the Board. An external consultant can also be used for the exercise. Using an outside facilitator/consultant may make it more likely that Board Members will give frank responses.
- The Board could take a retreat to discuss the results of the evaluation.
- The Board should determine the interpretation and implication it wishes to give the scores e.g.

Score 5: Very Good. No need for action

Score 4: Good. Some improvement required

Score 3: Fair. Substantial improvement required

Score 2: Poor. Major review required

Score 1: Very Poor. The Board is completely dysfunctional. Major and urgent review is required.

Areas receiving scores of Very Poor to Fair should receive special attention by the Board depending on their priority rating. The total score for the Board should also be similarly given a rating. If the total score of the Board is poor to very poor, then a major reorganization or the appointment of a new Board may be required. An external or peer review of such a Board would be immediately desirable.

6. The column for "Don't know" (score 6) is useful in that it can identify training needs required for the Directors.

7. As the Board becomes used to its own internal review, it should be encouraged to move on to the evaluation of individual Members of the Board and its Chairperson. A sample of such review is given in the Appendix below but not for immediate introduction before the overall Board self-evaluation takes root as a culture of the organization.

Section B: Sample Form for Evaluation of the Chairperson of the Board (By the Other Board Members and the Chief Executive Officer) Use a scale score of 1 - very poor, 2 - poor; 3 - fair; 4 - good, 5 - very good, with comments as appropriate.

Notes on Section B and C:

1. In the case of the evaluation of the Chairperson, should the Chairperson's performance be considered unsatisfactory, the

Deputy Chairperson or a Director elected by the other members for this purpose, will have a discussion with the other Directors to discuss whether the appointing authority or the shareholders should be alerted.

2. The evaluation of the individual members should be administered by the Chairperson on a one to one basis. Should a Director's performance be found to be unsatisfactory, the Chairperson should:

Identify training needs for the Director especially in the case of inexperienced Directors with potential for good performance.

Indicate areas which need to be addressed in order for the Director's performance to meet the needs of the organization.

Where necessary, indicate that recommendation for re-appointment will not be forthcoming.

3. The Board should be sensitive to the fact that the evaluation of Chairperson and individual Directors can be quite disruptive in relationships between the Directors. The Board may therefore wish to initially undertake the overall Board evaluation. The others other evaluations can then be subsequently undertaken after the Directors have gotten used to the idea of Board evaluations and after these evaluations have been included in their letters of appointment as conditions for their acceptance of the appointments.

4. In the case of the evaluation of individual Directors, the process can also be varied to include a self-evaluation questionnaire and/or a cross evaluation by the other Directors.

Chief Executive Officer.
