TR 185

Facts

H is a private company incorporated in Mauritius. It holds a Category 1 Global Business Licence and is tax resident in Mauritius. The principal activities of H are investment holding and it currently owns 64.89% in B, a company incorporated and tax resident in Uganda.

B is an electric energy generating company operating a power station in Uganda.

In accordance with the Uganda Income Tax Act, the income of B derived from the hydro power project is exempt from income tax from 01 July 2017 to 30 June 2022. This exemption was granted as part of the effort of the government to reduce the cost of electricity with a view to promote economic development in Uganda.

Point at issue

Whether H is entitled to claim tax sparing credit in respect of dividend receivable from B against the Mauritius tax imposed on such income?

Ruling

On the basis of the above, it is confirmed that H is entitled to claim tax sparing credit in respect of dividend receivable from B in accordance with the provisions of Regulation 9 of the Income Tax (Foreign Tax Credit) Regulations 1996 and Article 24(3) of the DTAA between Mauritius and Uganda.

TR 186Facts

F is a private company incorporated in Mauritius with liability limited by shares and holds a management licence issued by the Financial Services Commission (“FSC”).

F was acquired on 1 January 2017 by S. The acquisition of F was effected through a newly incorporated wholly owned subsidiary of S, M which is registered in Mauritius as a private company. The business activity of M is to act as the parent company of F and F Trustees, a related company.

The agreement for the sale and purchase of the entire issued share capital of F and its trustees makes mention of sale of shares only. However in accordance with IFRS 3, the consideration paid for the acquisition of F is broken down in the accounts of M into three components, namely -

- (i) The Net Assets Value of F;
- (ii) Contract and Customer Intangibles; and
- (iii) Goodwill.

Hence each identifiable asset forming part of the purchase consideration has been recorded separately in the books of M. According to IAS 38, identifiable assets having a finite life are subject to amortisation. The “contract and customer intangibles” have been assessed with a finite life of 6 years.

It is proposed to merge F and M where F will be the surviving company for the following reasons -

- (i) the “contract and customer intangibles” are recorded in the books of M and the income generated by that asset is recorded in F ;
- (ii) because the asset is recorded in one company and the income in another company, the transaction has given rise to a commercial and accounting mismatch which is against the matching concept; and
- (iii) following the merger, F will amortise the “contract and customer intangibles” over its useful life.

Point at issue

Whether F will be entitled to claim annual allowance at the rate of 5% on the cost of the “contract and customer intangibles” under Section 24 of the Income Tax Act and Income Tax Regulations 1996?

Ruling

MRA is of the view that there is no commercial and accounting mismatch of assets and income in view of the following:

M has purchased the shares of the shareholders of F. F has continued as a going concern without any change in its operations. Only the shareholders have changed. F is providing management services to its customers. In exchange for the management services, F is entitled to receive a fee which is accounted as revenue in its Income Statement. The contracts are between F and the customers. The change in shareholders has changed nothing in the business of F. The customers will continue to transact with F and they have no contractual relationship with M.

M is receiving dividends in return for the shares purchased in F. It is entitled to amortise the component of the purchase consideration for the shares which is represented by “contract and customer intangibles” under normal accounting principles. However, since dividend is an exempt income, it will not be entitled to annual allowance by virtue of Sections 24 and 26 of the Income Tax Act.

The merger is, in our view, being used as a medium to transfer the intangible asset from M to F, the origin of which is in F itself and same could not previously be recognised in the books of F in accordance with paragraph 63 of IAS 38 which prohibits the recognition of internally generated intangible assets.

In the circumstances, F will not be entitled to claim annual allowance on the “contract and customer intangibles” under Section 24 of the Income Tax Act and the Income Tax Regulations.

VATR 81Facts

B – (“the Company”) is a private company incorporated in Mauritius and is involved in the construction industry, hiring of plant and machinery and civil engineering projects. The Company holds a Grade A Category of construction license issued by the Construction Industry Development Board.

The Company has entered into a contract with C for the construction of an office for a final agreed amount of Rs 257M. However, in the execution of the project, the Company has not been able to meet the deadline set for its completion. Accordingly, in line with the clause set out in the conditions of contract, damages termed as “Liquidated and Ascertained Damages” - (LAD) is applicable. The Company was therefore liable to pay Rs 10M as LAD.

Point at issue

Whether in case the final agreed amount of the contract duly certified by the Project Consultants amounts to Rs 257M, VAT should be applied on the amount of Rs 257M or on the amount of the contract after deducting the LAD of Rs 10M, i.e Rs 247M?

Ruling

The value of the taxable supply of the Company in respect of the above contract is, in accordance with Section 12 of the Value Added Tax Act, the agreed contract value of Rs 257M. VAT should therefore be charged on the amount of Rs 257M, before deduction of the LAD.
