*Government Notice No. 1472The Queen's Counsel Ordinance, 1958PRACTICE DIRECTION

The functions which, in England, are performed by a solicitor and not performed by a barrister include the signing and service of the documents set out below, and these functions should not be performed by Queen's Counsel. There is no objection to Queen's Counsel accepting instructions to draft such documents, but they should be signed by junior counsel, or by the client in person.

2. Pleadings should continue to be signed by the counsel who settled them.

3. Queen's Counsel should not hold themselves out as prepared to accept service of notices or other documents on behalf of their clients, other than hearing notices sent out by the Registrar of the Court concerned.

4. Nothing in this Direction applies—

- (i) to anything done by a Queen's Counsel who holds the office of Attorney-General, Solicitor-General or Director of Public Prosecutions of the Federation or of a Region in the exercise of his constitutional or statutory functions; or
- (ii) to anything done by a legal practitioner who is not a Queen's Counsel in the name of a partnership of which the members include a Queen's Counsel.

DOCUMENTS NOT TO BE SIGNED OR SERVED BY QUEEN'S COUNSEL

Applications for the issue of a writ of summons or other process.

Notices of Motion.

Notices of Appeal.

Other notices to the Court or to the opposing party.

Affidavits of any kind for use in a cause or matter, except where Queen's Counsel vouches of his own knowledge to the facts contained therein.

Any other document of which the form contained in the Appendices to the Annual Practice provides for signature by a solicitor.
