It is foreseen that the increase in individual activity will provide an increasing requirement for services of the Institute on a free-earning basis. At an early date the several development agencies in the country are likely to provide scope for the Institute's activities in numerous technical problems arising in connection with development schemes. It is the intention, therefore, as soon as the Institute is able to justify such step, that it will become an autonomous body taking its place among the numerous organisations concerned with development which have been set up within the Federation.

Special qualities are called for in this appointment as the policy of the Institute as demonstrated by its programmes and contributions to development will require to convince a variety of agencies, enterprises and individuals of its value. A close and sympathetic understanding of Nigerian conditions and character will be needed to ensure that the purpose of the Institute is understood in the different regions of a country where diversity of conditions may be said to be the most outstanding characteristic.
