3. Background.—Pakistan, with more than 100 million population, and a rather rapid recent growth in industrial enterprises, has given much attention to development of technical and science education, particularly at the technician and undergraduate college and university levels. There are eleven universities, including three in engineering and 2 in agriculture, 200 Arts and Science degree colleges, 50 professional schools, 128 teacher-training schools and 18 teacher-training colleges. The total number of students is approximately 25,000 in the universities, 300,000 in the colleges and 30,000 in teacher-training institutions.

At the university graduate level, however, only relatively few programmes have been developed, particularly in science and engineering, with the result that hundreds of Pakistanis now go abroad for advanced studies and many do not return. In 1966, there were 3,000 students enrolled in graduate courses in science in Pakistan universities.

Pakistan has a rather extensive pattern of research institutes which, in all require the service of some 10,000 scientists with high qualifications. The Pakistan Council for Scientific and Industrial Research, and the Pakistan Atomic Energy Commission employ 700 and 500 scientists respectively in various laboratories in East and West Pakistan. Twelve other Research Councils and Institutes have been established covering fields of agriculture, medicine, health, irrigation and flood control, housing, meteorology, forestry, jute, cotton and other fields.

The need for scientific personnel mentioned above and the further need for improvement of science teaching faculties at all levels, coupled with the difficulty of congregating a sufficiently large number of high-level scientists at one institution led the Government of Pakistan to establish in 1966, the University of Islamabad as an autonomous university devoted entirely to science education and research at the graduate level. It is planned by this means to attract the best Pakistani scholars in the country or abroad to form a high-level group of scientists who can establish a graduate university in science equal to any in the world. It is also hoped to reverse the "brain drain" of Pakistani scholars emigrating abroad. Some thirty talented scholars have already returned to take up posts and more are under recruitment.

A site of 1,500 acres near Islamabad was acquired, building plans approved and construction began in 1968. As an interim measure, temporary buildings in Satellite Town, between Islamabad and Rawalpindi, have been utilized to initiate an instruction programme which began in 1967. Courses in mathematics, theoretical physics and chemistry are given, starting in the 1968-69 academic year.

From its inception the university has had counsel and assistance from the Ford Foundation and anticipates continued assistance for the next several years.

To further develop and equip the University, the Government has requested the assistance of the UNDP (Special Fund).

The request of the Government anticipates a first phase of the project for a duration of three years, to be followed by a second phase which will be elaborated at a later date.

The objective of the project is to reinforce the science teaching and research staff in those areas of specialization where fully qualified national staff is not available, to provide further training of national staff and to better equip laboratories for teaching and research.

When fully developed, the University will be composed of six Institutes, namely mathematics, physics, chemistry, biology, earth sciences and social sciences and will be devoted entirely to post-graduate education and research, offering work toward M.Sc., M.Phil. and Ph.D. degrees, and post-doctoral research. It is expected that about 50 science graduates from other universities will be admitted annually to each Institute. Since work leading to the Ph.D. is expected to require five or six years, depending upon previous preparation, the enrolment in each Institute is estimated to reach 150 in 1975 and 250-300 in 1980.

The UNDP (Special Fund) is requested to supply 16 internationally recruited visiting professors in different specialties for one year each, a number of fellowships of 2 years' duration for further training of national staff, equipment for laboratories in physics, biology, earth sciences and workshop, and library books, journals and documents for a total amounting to approximately 1½ million US dollars. Major laboratory equipment items would include a liquid nitrogen plant, mass spectrometer, nuclear magnetic resonance unit, electron spin resonance equipment, infrared and ultraviolet spectrometer, X-Ray densitometers, oscilloscopes, equipment for silicon planar technology, etc.

At present, the Institute of Physics has 14 members on its staff. Eleven are specialized in various aspects of theoretical particle Physics. In future, mostly Pakistani experimentalists will join the Institute. The present strength of students is 20 out of which 5 are doing research work for their Ph.D. Major facilities in electronics (circuitry), physical electronics and semiconductor physics are planned. Some work in these branches is expected to start by autumn 1970. The total number of students expected to be present in the session beginning October 1970 is 30, and about 40 the following year.
