Other benefits.—Installation allowance, education grant for children, repatriation grant upon termination of assignment, 30 working days' annual leave, home leave travel with eligible dependants every 2 years, social security benefits.

Description of duties.

General.—(a) To serve as a member of an ILO project team. He will be responsible to the project manager.

(b) To co-ordinate, supervise and control the detailed collection and evaluation of data relating to the MOW ILO/NORAD research project in appropriate technology in road construction in Kenya.

Specific.—(a) To work with the project manager in the planning of data collection.

(b) To supervise the collection of data on all aspects of road construction related to the Rural Access Roads Programme in Kenya. This will cover such matters as road construction techniques and their associated parameters, design, site management and organisation, skills and training and costs.

(c) To work with the project manager in the evaluation of data and production of the study document in relation to the objective of the research. This is to assess the rural Access Roads Programme and technologies appropriate to it.

Qualifications required.—A university degree and professional qualifications in civil engineering.

Practical experience in planning and managing the execution of road construction projects, particularly in earth works for secondary roads. Experience in the application of relatively high labour-intensive methods in those activities is highly desirable.

A good knowledge of calculations and costing procedures and ability to evaluate road construction projects.

Considerable organisational skill and ability to control a research study.

Experience of road construction in developing countries, preferably Africa.

Ability and willingness to work in rural areas under conditions that may not always be comfortable.

A pleasing and adaptable personality able to get along with all kinds of people and understand the viewpoints and problems of those whose background and culture may be different from his own.

Background.—The Republic of Kenya has started a country-wide scheme on rural development. The forerunner of the scheme is the Special Rural Development Programme, an integrated and experimental programme which started in 1970/71 and is operating in six pilot areas. The second stage includes the District Development Programmes which are presently being planned and will finally cover the entire country.

The Rural Access Roads Programme has grown out of the implementation of the SRDP schemes. It is assumed that approximately 80,000 kilometres of access roads will eventually be included in the RAR activities.

The MOW/ILO/NORAD project is a comprehensive research study which will attempt to indicate the most appropriate technological methods to be used in the RAR programme. It will also investigate the design and institutional factors relating to road construction and show how these can be modified to the benefit of more labour-intensive construction methods.

The IBRD in conjunction with the Transport and Road Research Laboratory of the UK is already conducting a project in Kenya which is attempting to assess project investment criteria in relation to design standards and appropriate technological methods.

Language.—A very good knowledge of written and spoken English.

Other benefits.—Installation allowance, education grant for children, repatriation grant upon termination of assignment, 30 working day's annual leave home leave travel with eligible dependants every two years, social security benefits.

Description of duties :

1. To make an assessment of the training needs for all categories of port personnel for the next 10 to 15 years, firstly in the port of Manila and subsequently in the other ports of the Philippines, taking into account the present dock labour force, its age distribution, the probable rate of admission of new entrants, the foreseen economic development of the country and its repercussions on the traffic through the ports, the foreseen changes in methods of handling cargo (introduction of palletisation, containerisation, roll-on/roll-off methods, etc.), the purchase of new equipment, the natural attrition of the dock labour force and other relevant elements.

2. On the basis of this assessment, and in collaboration with the other expert assigned to the project, to determine what training facilities must be put at the disposal of port personnel in Manila and to assist the Government (the Bureau of Customs) to develop and improve the existing Training Centre for Port Personnel. The development of this Centre will include a determination of the type of courses to be established, the number of workers to be admitted to each course, the qualifications required for admission, the preparation of syllabi for each course and a determination of the certificates, if any, to be issued at the end of each course.

3. To train the counterparts in training activities.

4. To pay particular attention to the training of those categories of port personnel who are most in contact with modern and highly sophisticated mechanical equipment, either in their capacity of operators of this equipment or as maintenance personnel.

5. In the light of the considerations above, to assist the Bureau of Customs in the establishment of courses for :

- gang leaders ;
- tally clerks ;
- signalmen ;
- operators of mechanical equipment ;
- ordinary dockworkers ;
- maintenance personnel (electricians, mechanics, carpenters).

6. To give consideration to the establishment of training facilities for those categories of port personnel not mentioned in previous paragraphs, such as the top level supervisors, i.e. :

- pier superintendent ;
- shed superintendent ;
- motor pool superintendent ;
- day shed supervisor ;
- night supervisor ;

or the first and second-line supervisors, i.e. :

- delivery supervisors ;
- quay supervisors ;
- supervisors of bay checkers ;
- container terminal operations co-ordinator ;
- supervising gate inspector ;
- transfer supervisor ;
- supervising timekeeper ;
- receiving foreman ;
- delivery foreman ;
- rotation officer (company) ;
- rotation officer (head checker).

Qualifications required.—The expert should if possible be of Norwegian nationality and have wide experience and knowledge of training of port personnel at all levels. He should be able to prepare meaningful statistics of all available data concerning number and qualifications of existing port personnel and determine, by means of carefully devised projection, the future position for the next 10 to 15 years ; and on the basis of this analysis, determine the training needs for port personnel at all levels. He should be capable of preparing appropriate syllabi for courses at all levels, to determine the number and qualifications of workers to be admitted to each course and to select the most qualified instructors for the courses to be established.

He should be capable of dealing tactfully with port authorities as well as with port personnel at all levels. He should possess imagination and flexibility, enabling him to overcome unexpected difficulties. He should have team spirit.

Language.—English.
