Other benefits.—Installation allowance, education grant for children, repatriation grant upon termination of assignment, 30 working days' annual leave, home leave travel with eligible dependants every 2 years, social security benefits.

Description of duties :

Background.—In most countries in Asia, co-operatives fulfil essential services in the field of supply, production and internal marketing of consumer goods, agricultural inputs and produce. For this purpose, the co-operative movement has established purchase and marketing organisations of various kinds up to the national level. However, only a few co-operative organisations have succeeded in establishing service-oriented export/import trading organisations which would allow these co-operative organisations to plough back possible trading profits accrued from international trade to their producer/consumer members.

The ILO intends to assist the co-operative organisations of the Asian region in the establishment and development of trade relations between various co-operative organisations at an international level. For this purpose, one expert/adviser and two short-term experts will be appointed.

Based on data and information collected during an initial phase of the project, the project team will organise and carry out an international workshop with participants from co-operative organisations (from developing countries of Asia and from developed countries) and international bodies. Following the workshop, the expert will render short-term advice and assistance to interested co-operative organisations of the region with a view to strengthening their trade capacity and trade links.

General.—The expert during the 12 months of his assignment will be required to collect information and data on co-operative trade, prepare and organise the workshop and render assistance to national co-operative organisations interested in international trade.

Specific.—In particular the expert is expected to undertake the following duties :

- collect information, statistics and data related to co-operative trade ;

- update existing co-operative trade directory ;

- evaluate existing reports on co-operative trade ;
- establish contacts with co-operative organisations in the region which are or would like to be engaged in foreign trade ;

- establish contacts with co-operative trade organisations from developed countries with a view to securing their participation in the workshop and its follow-up ;

- solicit support of international organisations (ESCAP, GATT, UNCTAD, FAO, etc.) and international co-operative organisations (ICA, etc.) for the workshop and its follow-up activities ;

- prepare and implement the trade workshop and act as resource person during the same ;

- prepare evaluation report on the workshop and assist in the implementation of its recommendations ;

- render short-term advisory services to interested co-operative organisations on general trade aspects and on the organisation of international trade ;

- assist in the organisation of national training seminars on co-operative trade ;

- assist in preparation of fellowship programme and in selection of fellows ;

- make proposals and recommendations for further assistance to national co-operative organisations in the field of co-operative trade ;

- co-ordinate the activities of the expert on marketing and expert on management and serve as team leader.

Qualifications required.—The expert should have sound experience in import and export trade and very good knowledge of managerial and organisational aspects of large-scale trading organisations including co-operatives. He should be fully familiar with legal and business aspects of international trade, preferential schemes, trade agreements, etc. Experience in the organisation and running of workshops and training seminars and programmes would be a definite advantage.

The expert should have educational qualifications in either economics, business administration and commerce or related fields and preferably gained part of his experience in developing countries.

Language.—Excellent knowledge of English.
