ANNEX

IMPROVEMENT OF THE RIVER AND FLOOD FORECASTING AND WARNING SYSTEM FOR THE INDUS RIVER BASIN IN PAKISTAN

The purpose of this project, the first phase of which will have a duration of 3 years, is to establish a modern forecasting system for the Indus River Basin in Pakistan. This is to be achieved through the implementation of a large project which will have the following components :

Component I : Expansion and modernization of the basic hydrological data collection and processing system.

Component II : Establishment of a radar hydrology and a meteorological satellite read-out support system.

Component III : Establishment of a river and flood forecasting system.

Although the project is to be funded from different sources, (bi-lateral assistance for Component I and UNDP funds for Components II and III), it will be implemented as a single project. The three components of the project are inter-related and inter-dependent.

Component I will provide hydrometric observations and records of improved quality and ensure that these data are received by the Flood Warning Center in near-real-time. The component also provides for the streamflow routing model, an integral part of the forecasting model.

Component II (radar) will provide calculated amounts and a real distribution of precipitation from the headwaters area in Kashmir as well as track the progress and development of storms from India into the Upper Indus basin. This will improve the lead time of the forecasts for the "rim" stations by a minimum of 6 hours and a maximum of 36 hours, with an average of about 24 hours. The accuracy and reliability of the forecasts for downstream points as well as the "rim" stations will be improved because of the precise timing and a real distribution of rainfall supplied by radar.

Component III the forecasting system, will be the culmination of the comprehensive project. It includes the catchment (rainfall-runoff) model, hydrometeorological observing and reporting stations, training of counterpart river forecasters and the organization of all the necessary elements into a complete and functional system. This component is completely dependent upon the observation and data collection systems provided by Components I and II.
